Now The Judges, who first banded together in musical protest against the prevailing “pop” music, find themselves caught up in a routine similar to that of any pop star. The radio and television broadcasts, the concert tours, the ballroom and club engagements and so forth - these are now part of the life of The Judges. But their greatest satisfaction is that in spite of their phenomenal success they can still play the kind of music they believe in and carry it to an ever widening audience. The smiles on the five faces of The Judges are quite understandable.
